Dove Coggeshall is an Arlington, VA, Master Gardener, Tree Steward, and general plant enthusiast specializing in impulse buys. She also has excellent spatial relationship skills; and just when you think your trunk is full, she can help you squeeze in a few more plants.

Liz Haegle is a former Scott Arboretum Curatorial Intern (2006-2007) and assistant Education Coordinator at Scott. She is now an Urban Forestry Coordinator at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society

Harriet Henderson is the co-owner of Cushing & Henderson, a landscape architecture firm in Unionville, PA. With an emphasis on connections with horticulture and architecture, their garden designs range from formal to naturalistic, and from Western to Asian. She holds landscape architecture and architecture degrees from Cornell University and the University of Pennsylvania, combined with a work-study grant in Kyoto gardens and a Longwood Gardens internship. At home, she enjoys experimenting with design and focusing on woodland and meadow natives.

Mark Highland is the president and original founder of The Organic Mechanics Soil Company, which produces all organic potting soils and soil amendments for gardeners. Known as "The Organic Mechanic", he is also a regular guest on the NBC 10!Show in Philadelphia.
